NORTH PHILLY SCIENCE SCHOOL STUDENTS PARTICIPATE IN PRESS PREVIEW OF GEORGE WASHINGTON CARVER EXHIBIT

Friday, November 13, 10 a.m.

WHAT: Students from George Washington Carver School for Engineering and Science, a North Philadelphia public magnet high school, are the first to tour the Academy of Natural Sciences' fall exhibit George Washington Carver. (The exhibit itself opens the next day, Saturday, Nov. 14.) A student will speak about the school's namesake and students will be available to talk to the media.

WHEN: Friday, November 13, 10 a.m.–11:30 a.m.

10 a.m.–10:15 a.m.: Students, media tour exhibit

10:15 a.m.–10:25 a.m.: Brief remarks by Academy President William Brown, a student from the Carver school, and Thomas Anderson, founder of the George Washington Carver Science Fair.

10:25 a.m.–11:30 a.m.: Free time in exhibit

WHERE: The Academy of Natural Sciences, 1900 Benjamin Franklin Parkway, Philadelphia. Please enter at the members entrance on 19th Street.

BACKGROUND: George Washington Carver, a groundbreaking scientist, educator and humanitarian who laid the groundwork for organic farming and today's research on plant-based fuels, is the subject of a new exhibit at the Academy of Natural Sciences beginning Saturday, Nov. 14. George Washington Carver makes its East Coast debut with more than 150 historical artifacts, videos, interactive displays and re-created scenes that trace Carver's modest beginning as a child of a slave in the Deep South to a world-renowned scientist with a postage stamp, submarine and national monument in his honor.
